

College board votes to use money in estate

By STEPHEN A. SEEWOESTER
Democrat-Capital Staff Writer

The State Fair Community College Board of Trustees voted unanimously Wednesday night to draw up plans for a permanent learning resources center and classroom facility. The structure will be built with $2.4 million willed to the college by the late Mrs. Elizabeth Yeater.

The new building, to be located northwest of the present facility on Clarendon Road, is estimated to cost $2,396,200 according to the architectural firm of Sammons and Buller.

"While I am not pleased that we have to spend all of the Yeater money for the project, I am happy that we will be building a permanent building and image to serve the students of this area better," SFCC President Fred Davis said after the meeting.

Davis made four recommendations to the board before the vote:

✓ That SFCC spend the Yeater money outright to build the learning resources center and classroom building.

✓ That the college continue to offer an area vocational technical program with present facilities, including rented space.

✓ That SFCC re-evaluate the priority of offering high school vo-tech programs because of crowding of these classes at the post-high school level.

✓ That SFCC explore ways to match a $650,000 grant allocated by the state toward a vocational-technical facility.

Although the board discussed all the recommendations it only voted on Davis' first recommendation.

Davis said priority now is being placed on high school students in the SFCC vo-tech area, but "since we are not receiving tax money from these areas we should reconsider our policy of accepting students, for example, from the Stover area."

High schools now pay SFCC $395 per student for vocational-technical classes.

Construction on the new building would not begin until next spring, according to architect Don Buller, "which is the time we need to draw up specifications and get bids back from building contractors."

Buller said the original plans were modified to exclude a fine arts section because the addition would have made the project too costly.

The new building will face 16th Street, and access will be from a driveway off 16th.

The $2.4 million estimated cost breaks down as follows: 22,000 square feet in classrooms, $660,000; 17,000 square feet for library, $510,000; 24,000 square feet for media center, $912,000; site development, $100,000; architect's fee $130,000; and a 4 per cent allowance for non-structural improvements, $83,280. These are anticipated costs by the architect and will be bid by contractors in several months, according to Buller.

Davis told the board that equipment costs after the building is completed would be minimal because SFCC has much of its equipment and furniture in its temporary and rented facilities.

The board requested that Buller look into the possibility of letting separate bids for parts of the project so it could be started this winter. Buller said some work could be done that way.

The administrator of the Yeater estate, John Pelham, approved the project, and said he was disappointed at the recent bond issue defeat.

GOP candidates criticize surtax

WASHINGTON (AP) — A number of Republican candidates in next month's elections have disassociated themselves from the anti-inflation surtax that President Ford contends would cost taxpayers only a few cents a day.

Criticism from GOP Senate and gubernatorial candidates came as the senior Republican on the House Ways and Means Committee, Rep. Herman T.

Schneebeli, R-Pa., said he believes the fate of Ford's 5 per cent surtax proposal "rests on the American public and what they tell us when we go home."

Ford, who has conceded that many thought the tax proposal "politically unwise" just four weeks before the Nov. 5 elections, tried a new approach in defending it Wednesday at his outdoor news conference in the White House Rose Garden.

A family of four with $20,000 gross income would pay $42, or 12 cents a day, while a family with $16,000 income would pay only $3 — or less than one penny per day, Ford said.

And he said that only 28 per cent of the nation's taxpayers would pay any additional tax. He said enactment of the surtax and the rest of his anti-inflation package could produce "a meaningful reduction in the rate of inflation" by early 1975.

Ford went to Philadelphia to boost Republican candidates Wednesday night. He told a fund-raising dinner the surtax is fair and equitable.

The American people "want to step up and do what's right. Politicians ought to do the same thing," Ford said.

But just before the President arrived, the Republican gubernatorial candidate in Pennsylvania, Drew Lewis, told reporters he opposed the surtax and suggested closing tax loopholes instead.

And Republican Sen. Richard S. Schweiker of Pennsylvania, also up for re-election, denounced the surtax.

In Kansas, GOP Sen. Robert Dole declared that many people in the state who made $15,000 were suffering economically and "the last thing they need is an additional surtax to pay."

Falling farm prices offset industrial rise

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices rose only one-tenth of a per cent last month as falling farm prices offset increases in the cost of industrial goods, the government reported today.

The modest September price rise followed near-record increases in July and August. The September increase was the smallest price advance since wholesale prices declined a tenth of a per cent last October.

Consumers still face sharp retail price hikes in the coming months, because of big wholesale price boosts during the summer.

Also, the drop in farm prices last month is likely to be only temporary, with adverse weather expected to drive prices higher once again.

Earlier this week, the White House predicted that food prices would continue to increase at an annual rate of 10 per cent or more over the next 18 months.

The September increase, adjusted to discount seasonal influences, works out to an annual rate of 1.2 per cent, a sharp contrast to the 46.8 per cent annual rate in August.

Police plan no action

No action is presently planned against police officers named in the list of charges against Police Chief William Miller, acting police chief Charles Knapp said Thursday.

"No action can be taken against these officers until the hearing for the chief is finished because nothing has yet been proven against the men," Knapp said.

Nine officers are mentioned in the list of charges Mayor Jerry Jones presented as reasons for suspending Miller. The suspension took effect at 5 p.m. Wednesday. Knapp became acting chief of police at the request of the mayor.

"I've accepted the job because the mayor asked me to and I'll take care of the department to the best of my ability until the situation with the chief is straightened out," Knapp said.

Knapp refused to comment about the charges against Miller until the hearing settles the matter. The City Council will meet Monday night in a closed, special session to set a date for the public hearing.

"I had no indication that the chief would be suspended and I didn't know it until he called me after the mayor told him," Knapp said.

He said that if any personnel changes occur, they would have to be made under the present merit system. "I can't make any changes with the men, the merit system doesn't allow this," Knapp said.

When asked if he had any indication whether he would be appointed chief in the event of Miller's dismissal, Knapp said that a new chief could only be appointed through the merit system. "As long as the merit system is in effect, the chief will be appointed by that system through examination and qualifications."

Until the results of the hearing are known, Knapp said he has no new plans for the police department. "As far as I'm concerned, the department is running smoothly," he said.

Knapp said that he hasn't spoken to all of his officers about Miller's suspension, but

Burglary cases not revealed to mayor

Former Mayor Ralph Walker said Thursday he was never told in 1968 that two Sedalia police officers had admitted to Police Chief William Miller they were responsible for 44 burglaries of business places here.

Walker, a Republican who was mayor from 1966 to 1970, told The Democrat-Capital "it was really a shock" to hear of the incident. "I never heard a word about anything like that. It didn't get out of there (the police department). I wish I had known about it at the time," Walker said.

According to Walker, he never received a complaint from either citizens or other members of the police department concerning the burglaries.

"It's so hard to believe all this stuff was going on back then," he said. According to Walker, the information had to be "squelched" by police officials because he was not aware of the cases until this week.

The revelation of the burglaries came Wednesday morning when Mayor Jerry Jones announced he was suspending Miller without pay pending the outcome of a public hearing of 10 charges made against the police chief.

The first of the charges concerned former police officers Charles N. Shepard and Robert Lewis, accused of the 44 burglaries.

The charge states that in March or April, 1968, the two admitted their involvement to Lt. Jewel Riley, Sgt. Al Blankenship and assistant police chief Charles Knapp. The charge also says Riley and Blankenship reported the matter to Miller, and that Shepard and Lewis admitted to Miller they were responsible for the burglaries.

The charge then says that Miller "in total disregard of the recommendation and urging of Lt. Jewel Riley and Sgt. Albert Blankenship that criminal charges be filed against the offending officers... refused to do so." Rather than disciplining the officers, the charge maintains, Miller allowed them to resign. It also says he withheld "... evidence and admissions of committing said forty-four burglaries from the then prosecuting Attorney of Pettis County, to-wit: Henry Keeler..."

In an interview Thursday, Walker told The Democrat-Capital the only

Jim Martin and John Banich, owners of the old Sedalia High School and Business College, destroyed by fire two weeks ago, started to demolish the building's remains Thursday morning. A crane from a Kansas City firm failed to show up Thursday, so operations were begun with a bulldozer and a cable. Banich said he wanted to salvage some of the steel from the ruins before the crane arrived sometime next week.

Former school leader dies here

Dr. Thomas J. Norris, 59, 1110 South Warren, who served as superintendent of Sedalia's public schools for 15 years before his retirement in 1973, died at 4:40 p.m. Wednesday at Bothwell Hospital.

In recent years Norris had suffered severe heart problems and was treated on several occasions in the Bothwell Hospital intensive care unit.

After resigning from his post as superintendent here, he was named principal of the Sweet Springs R-7 elementary school. He resigned from that position shortly after school began this year, citing ill health.

Before becoming superintendent here, Norris served as superintendent of schools in Harrodsburg, Ky., for five years. He received his B.A. degree in 1940 from Kentucky Wesleyan College, Winchester, Ky.; his M.A. in 1951 from the University of Kentucky, Lexington; and his doctor's degree in education from the same school in 1962. He came to Sedalia in 1958 from Harrodsburg.

Before entering the education field, he worked as a chemical analyst for Texaco at Pryse, Ky. His first teaching position was in Owensville, Ky., in 1940. A year later he went to Raleigh, N.C., where he was a basketball and football coach, as well as a teacher of chemistry, physics and biology. A four-year tour of duty in the Army during World War II interrupted his work.

After completing his military service Norris briefly sold insurance before going back into the education field.

During his term as superintendent here,

Norris guided the public school system through one of its most trying challenges — integration of all public schools. Some of the major changes that occurred while he held the office included expansion of vocational education, increases in state and local aid to education, construction of Heber Hunt School and the Sedalia Junior High School, passage of two bond issues and the creation of special education classes, now housed at Hubbard School.

In April, 1973, Norris was honored at a banquet of the Community Educators Association. He received a standing ovation at the time. Teachers, administrators and members of the Sedalia Board of Education attended the event.

He was a member of Wesley United Methodist Church and the Kiwanis Club. He was a past-president of the Pettis County Historical Society.

Dr. Norris was born Sept. 1, 1915, at Paris, Ky., son of the late Thomas J. and Virginia Chaney Norris. He married Edna Lester at Lexington, Ky., in 1946, and she survives of the home.

Also surviving are a son, Charles Edward Norris, Columbia; two daughters, Mrs. Janet Downey, Springfield; Miss Ann

Nobel Prizes awarded

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Three scientists who did their major research in the United States were awarded the 1974 Nobel Prize for medicine or physiology today for being "largely responsible for the creation of modern cell biology."

The $124,000 prize was shared equally by British-born Christian de Duve, 57, who works at Rockefeller University in New York City; George E. Palade, 62, a naturalized American born in Romania who heads the cell biology section at Yale University's School of Medicine; and Albert Claude, 75, director of the Institut Jules Bordet at the Universite Libre in Brussels. Claude was born in Longlier, in the Luxembourg province of Belgium.

All three conducted their research at the Rockefeller Institute in New York, now known as Rockefeller University. Claude began the work by using the electron microscope and developing a procedure by which cell parts could be seen under it. Palade combined the two techniques to obtain more information, and De Duve carried this one step further by making predictions about structural components in the cell, the citation said.

In Brussels, Claude said it was "thanks to the United States and the Rockefeller Institute" that he was able to do the work that brought him distinction.

Hostage relates terrorists' siege

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (AP) — American diplomat Barbara Hutchison was in good spirits and joking after seven leftist terrorists released her and six other hostages in return for safe conduct out of the country.

"Suddenly I became a tremendous bargain. I went from a million to nothing," the 47-year-old American quipped to newsmen Wednesday night after the 13-day episode ended.

The gunmen originally demanded $1 million ransom and the release of 37 leftist prisoners. They got nothing except a safe getaway.

The terrorists, who had held the hostages since Sept. 27 in a second-floor room of the Venezuelan consulate, were flown aboard a special Dominican jet to Panama, where they proclaimed victory and said they were exhausted.

As they left the Boeing 727 at Tocumen International Airport near Panama City, the gunmen, led by leftist Radhames Mendez Vargas, were met by Lt. Col. Manuel Antonio Noriega, chief intelligence officer of the Panamanian National Guard.

Miss Hutchison, director of the U.S. Information Service in the Dominican Republic, said she and the other hostages were treated well during the siege and even developed "something of a friendship" with their captors.

But she said there were many tense moments, the most difficult being "the waiting and then the various crises as they occur. There was a package of dynamite, and we were living with that."

She said that gunmen and hostages alike often were short of water. The government intermittently allowed food and drink to be taken to those inside the consulate.

Miss Hutchison told newsmen that despite her ordeal she intends to continue her tour in the Dominican Republic that began in 1972 after a long USIS career in other parts of Latin America.

"Mendez bet me $5 that I would have to leave the Dominican Republic because (he said) all diplomatic kidnap victims have to leave the country once they are freed," she said. "But I was informed that I would have the option to go or stay, and I told Mendez I was staying."

The hostages — who also included two secretaries, a messenger boy, a Spanish priest and the Venezuelan consul and vice consul — were greeted by joyous friends and relatives when they emerged from the consulate.

At the same time, the terrorists were driven to the airport to board the special jetliner.

The gunmen took over the consulate after they kidnaped Miss Hutchison from outside her office about eight blocks away. In the early days of the siege the gunmen claimed that 23 terrorists were involved.

Government officials until Wednesday morning thought there were six of them. But a USIS photographer sent inside the building to photograph them for travel documents said there were seven.

Antitrust suit filed by Danforth

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Missouri attorney general's office has moved to take advantage of revisions made in the state's antitrust laws.

In the first suit filed since the changes became effective in August, Atty. Gen. John Danforth said Wednesday his office has filed an action to halt the merger between two St. Louis firms.

Judge Robert G. J. Hoester of St. Louis County Circuit Court, where the suit was filed, issued a temporary restraining order against the merger Wednesday and set Oct. 18 for a hearing.

The state's antitrust division has asked the court to stop the merger of Chromalloy American Corp., and the St. Louis Terminal Corp., on the grounds that it would create a monopoly involving the St. Louis river trade.

Contending that the one barge terminal operated by Chromalloy and the two by St. Louis Terminal are the only public barge terminals in the St. Louis port, Danforth said, "A merger will result in the 'monopolization' of such facilities" as well as restrain competition in the barge and towing business.

The revised antitrust act now makes monopolization an offense.

Sentence totals 320 years

KANSAS CITY (AP) — A Jackson County Circuit Court jury has assessed prison terms totaling 320 years against a man convicted of abducting two young boys and abusing them April 12.

Sam Dayton, 20, Suitland, Md., was found guilty Wednesday night on two counts of kidnapping and two counts of committing a crime against nature.

In July, Dayton's brother, Jimmy D. Dayton, 17, was found guilty on charges of kidnapping and crimes against nature and was assessed a term of 208 years in prison by another jury.

The two brothers were found guilty of torturing and abusing a 7-year-old boy and an 11-year-old boy after they were abducted near midtown Kansas City.

The brothers allegedly were accompanied by a third brother, Jerry Dayton, 18, and another man, Millard Swedson, 38. All four men are from Suitland.

Jerry Dayton and Swenson are awaiting trial.

Actor donates funds to begin MU scholarship

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Actor Edward Asner has donated funds to establish an Edward R. Murrow scholarship at the University of Missouri-Columbia's school of journalism.

Dean Roy Fisher has announced. Asner, a native of Kansas City, Kan., said he established the scholarship because of the professional and emotional debt he owes to the character of Lou Grant, the television newsroom editor he plays on television's Mary Tyler Moore show.

Fisher said the scholarship was named in honor of the late Murrow because of Asner's respect for the pioneer broadcast journalist.

The recipient of the $500 scholarship will be selected by the journalism school's scholarship committee and with the agreement of the chairman of the department of broadcasting.

Expo '74 is on its last legs

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Expo '74 has less than a month to live, and its imminent death is noticeable.

The spasms of a dying fair are reflected in tiny attendance and mark-downs in Expo souvenir prices by merchants fearful of being left with unsold merchandise.

But Expo General Manager Peter Spurney says: "The show is the same." He says that the 10 national pavilions, 43 domestic exhibits and other attractions on the 100-acre fair site will continue operating until the environmental exposition ends Nov. 3.

In Colfax, a prosperous agricultural community 50 miles south of Spokane, a large bin in the Star Foodland store is filled with unsold Expo coloring books, decals and other souvenirs. A sign says "Expo Souvenirs Half Price."

"We just didn't want to be stuck with them until the next world's fair," said store manager James Ellenz.

Only about 8,000 persons filed through Expo turnstiles one recent week day. It was a small crowd for a fair that had a daily attendance of more than 40,000 during August and September.

"When the gates opened in the morning last summer we'd have crowds streaming in for hours. Now it just takes two or three minutes for them to get in," said Steve Isaacson, a young man selling maps and Expo guides.

Joan Snarski sat at her concession booth, where world's fair tee-shirts were marked down $1 (from $5.95), watching small numbers of fairgoers stroll by. "What a difference," she said. "When we opened this summer people were five and six deep here trying to buy our stuff."

Spurney, meanwhile, was preparing for a news conference to announce an "Expo '74 Celebration Countdown" for a final month of fair entertainment and activities.

In addition to entertainment such as Ella Fitzgerald, Expo is sponsoring events including a midnight performance of the bare-breasted Senegal Dancers, a mass stomping of a half-ton of grapes and the Croaker College Chorus of frogs.

"We're not bankrupt. We're not closing early," Spurney said. "This fair is going out a winner. It's going out big."

Expo's paid attendance totaled more than 4.4 million as the gates opened this week, and Spurney says he's optimistic the count will reach five million by the fair's end.

Sharply reduced fall attendance was predicted even before the exposition opened, Spurney said.

The Expo Corp. has reduced its work force to 700 employees from a peak of almost 1,000, and some domestic and foreign pavilions are reducing staffs.

And Expo Deputy General Manager Charles Aly is preparing for the equivalent of a giant garage sale.

Expo — in keeping with its environmental theme — has vowed to recycle itself, except for the few permanent structures which will be left at the site for the city's permanent riverfront park.

Everything must go, Aly says. That includes miles of wiring, toilets, turnstiles, giant cloth-covered butterfly decorations, and 50 flagpoles.

R. H. (Hank) Monsees, Route 2, president of Monsees Realty Co., was notified Tuesday he had been appointed to the 25-member National Committee on Rural Development. He is the only Missourian on the panel.

The appointment was made by Lewis Cenko, president of the National Association of Home Builders, headquartered Monsees said the committee meets three times a year in Washington, and holds an annual convention in Dallas, Tex.

Tests on children near smelters urged

KELLOGG, Idaho (AP) — Several nationally known health officials say there should be immediate testing of children living near every lead smelter in the nation, following the discovery of abnormally high levels of the metal in Kellogg children.

"This is a national emergency," said Dr. Samuel Epstein, professor of environmental health at Case Western Reserve Medical School at Cleveland, Ohio.

He and other health officials were interviewed by the Lewiston Morning Tribune.

"We have enough data to know that people living around smelters are at risk and to call for immediate studies in the vicinity of every smelter in the country," said Epstein, a consultant to the Senate Committee on Public Works, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, the Department of Labor and the industrial union department of the AFL-CIO.

There are six primary lead smelters in the nation—at Kellogg, El Paso, Tex., East Helena, Mont., and at three locations in Missouri, the lead industry says.

Dr. Philip Landrigan, a public health officer associated with the federal Center for Disease Control at Atlanta, Ga., agreed that youngsters near all the smelters should be tested.

"People should be looking around every smelter to see if there is a problem, at least taking a preliminary look at young children to see if there is," he said.

Landrigan says he expects to soon announce the results of blood samples taken from about 20 youngsters living near the East Helena smelter.

Blood lead samples taken from 1,000 Kellogg children in August showed high levels of the metal among youngsters living near the Bunker Hill Co. smelter.

Dr. Herbert Domke, Missouri's state health officer, said "I have not had brought to my attention any finding to indicate there is a health hazard in connection with the operations" in his state.

Kimball will continue to give testimony

Leigh Kimball was present again Thursday morning to continue his testimony before the Pettis County grand jury looking into the Ozark Music Festival. Kimball was the media representative for the July festival.

Kimball had been subpoenaed to appear at 10 a.m. Wednesday, however he was not called until about 1:40 p.m. and left about 3:30 p.m., he said.

Also present Thursday morning was Chris Fritz, president of the festival promoters, Musical Productions Inc., who was scheduled to begin testimony at 10 a.m. Fritz said he did not expect to be called until Thursday afternoon, when the grand jury was also scheduled to hear testimony from David E. Kinton, secretary of MPI.

After Kimball's testimony Wednesday afternoon the grand jury heard testimony from Bennett Cash, treasurer of MPI, and Bob Brown, city license inspector. Brown was to bring all records of licenses issued to the festival.

Friday the grand jury will hear from Sal Brancator, vice-president of MPI, and Robert Shaw, vice-president of the advertising firm that handled the festival.

Woman still held after shooting

Carmen E. Goodwin, 31, 302 North Osage, is in "protective custody" in the Pettis County jail Thursday morning, according to Sheriff Emmett Fairfax.

Miss Goodwin allegedly shot George Payton, 41, 302 North Osage, in the right leg above the knee about 11:22 a.m. Wednesday with a .22 caliber weapon. He was treated at Bothwell Hospital and later released.

Thursday morning County Prosecuting Attorney Gary Fleming said, "Payton doesn't want her prosecuted nor does he feel she ought to be prosecuted." No charges have been filed.

Acting Police Chief Charles Knapp told The Democrat-Capital Miss Goodwin would not say why the shooting occurred. A statement from Payton was not available.

Fleming and Fairfax both said Miss Goodwin has a history of mental illness. County officials are waiting to see if her family will move to have her confined.

Excess in property taxes paid

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Local taxing districts have failed to adjust rates in line with continually increasing property taxes.

The result: Missouri taxpayers have been paying millions of dollars in excess property taxes.

This is one conclusion reached in a report issued today by the Missouri Public Expenditure Survey. It said that, in a large number of cases, counties and school districts based their tax rates on "the previous year's valuation or minor variation of it" even though the current year's assessment valuations were available.

The survey called for public hearings on the annual rates before they are adopted and for the state auditor to review the rates when he conducts county audits, which are required by law.

In recent audit reports on counties, Auditor John Ashcroft has made no mention of tax-rate inequities.

With property values rising constantly, the survey pointed out that basing tax rates on previous and lower valuations caused 70 of the state's 101 3rd and 4th class counties to collect $650,000 in excess property taxes. Seventy-eight of 100 selected school districts overtaxed residents by $9.4 million through the same practice, the study said.

The state budget laws for local taxing districts, according to the survey, call for the districts to determine their tax rates annually based on the monetary needs for running the unit and the current assessed valuation.

"The disregard of sound tax rate-setting practices undermines the very concept of budgeting as envisioned in the state's local government budget laws," the report said.

"The budget process is not one of merely obtaining and spending all revenue possible," it continued. "The public has a right to expect local governments will seek the amount of revenue needed to finance their authorized expenditures — and no more."

The report, noting that state taxpayers pay more in property taxes—about $800 million last year—than in combined sales and income taxes, recommended the use of current property evaluations to determine tax rates. It also said rates should be lowered as the property records annual increases in value.

Presiding judge is expected home

Pettis County Presiding Judge Harry Walch is expected to return home Saturday from St. Louis, where he has been an out patient at Barnes Hospital.

Walch left for the hospital Oct. 2 and has undergone therapy treatments. He earlier underwent surgery for the removal of a malignant tumor from his sinus passages.

confrontation he could remember with Miller involved higher pay for police officers. He said he considered that normal, since he, too, "would fight for my people." He said he thought that while he was mayor "Chief Miller was doing a good job, considering what he had to work with."

According to Walker, the rate of pay for starting officers in 1968 was less than $300 a month and that little could be expected when considering the calibre of men applying for the position at that wage scale.

Says Houtchens was asked to join bank board

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Delton Houtchens, former chairman of the Democratic Party in Missouri, did not seek out a spot on the board of directors in a bank in his hometown of Clinton, but was asked to join, the bank's former president has testified.

Adrain Craigmiles of Rich Hill, Mo., appeared before a federal grand jury Wednesday and testified he sought out Houtchens about joining the board of the First National Bank of Clinton while Houtchens had his party post.

The grand jury is investigating possible corruption in the administration of former Gov. Warren E. Hearnes. Houtchens was state party chairman the eight years Hearnes was governor.

The First National Bank of Clinton began receiving interest-free intangible tax deposits on April 3, 1968 with a deposit of $100,000 and received two similar deposits the following year.

Records at the state revenue department in Jefferson City show four more deposits of between $200,000 and $300,000 were received in 1971 and 1972. The records also reflect a deposit of $750,000 on April 19, 1972.

State law was changed in 1970 so such deposits were no longer interest-free, but they did draw lower than average interest.

Craigmiles was subpoenaed to bring records relating to the disposition of 67 shares of stock in the bank to Houtchens.

After testifying, Craigmiles told reporters only 10 shares of stock were involved. It did not take place in 1969 and Houtchens paid for the stock.

Craigmiles, who said he left the banking business in 1970, said Houtchens was paid $100 a month as a member of the bank's board.

He said he asked Houtchens to become a board member because "he had a lot of friends in the area" and "it was an honor to have the state Democratic chairman on our board."

Family is freed after ransom paid

YPSILANTI, Mich. (AP) — An Ypsilanti bank manager's wife and two children were freed unharmed today after the manager was forced to rob his own bank to ransom them, the FBI reported.

Mrs. Richard Green and her children, Erick 7, and Annette, 9, were released at a hotel about 15 miles west of Ypsilanti about 10:20 a.m. after being held hostage all night by four men.

Mrs. Green called her husband at the bank after being released and was picked up by police.

Police and FBI agents were secluded with the entire family at the bank, where they were being questioned.

A search was under way for the kidnapers.

The release came more than two hours after Green took what was described as "several thousand dollars" from the Ypsilanti Township branch of the Ypsilanti Savings Bank and left it at a secluded rural drop point.

The FBI said four men surprised the family Wednesday night in their Grass Lake home, about 40 miles from Ypsilanti. They were tied up all night, Green said. This morning Green was released and told to go to the bank and get all the money he could from the first teller that reported for work.

Hiring abuses under

Nixon said indicated

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House subcommittee chairman said today investigations indicate that improper political influence in federal hiring was widespread in former President Richard M. Nixon's administration.

Rep. David N. Henderson, D-N.C., chairman of the House Civil Service subcommittee, said evidence on some alleged hiring abuses has been turned over to Special Prosecutor Leon Jaworski. He refused to elaborate.

He said only that the abuses "appear to be tied to" the Federal Personnel Political Manual, described at Senate Watergate hearings last year as outlining a system of using federal agency hiring for political patronage.

Henderson released a report accusing the General Services Administration of improperly and sometimes illegally applying pressure on job referrals from congressmen, Nixon's White House and Nixon's reelection committee.

Resolution by 21 senators opposes propane increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — Twenty-one senators joined today in sponsoring a resolution opposing a proposed increase of three to five cents a gallon in the price of propane.

Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton, D-Mo., the chief sponsor, said a regulation allowing the increase is under active consideration by the Federal Energy Administration.

Eagleton said in a Senate speech the increase would not discourage new users of propane, most of whom would be corporations.

Those who would be hurt, he said, are rural families and those living in mobile homes who depend on propane for basic needs.

In view of the 200 per cent to 300 per cent increase in propane price last year, Eagleton said, the price "is already too high and if anything it should be rolled back."

Mrs. Ford will be released on Friday

WASHINGTON (AP) — First lady Betty Ford, making excellent progress, will be released from the Bethesda Naval Medical Center Friday, her surgeon announced today.

President Ford's wife has been hospitalized in the suburban Maryland center for two week since she underwent breast cancer surgery on Sept. 28.

In the 13th hospital bulletin issued Thursday morning, Navy Dr. William Fouty said that all of the sutures from the surgery have been removed, that Mrs. Ford's post-operative course remains excellent, and she "has excellent use of her right arm."

College board

"We have the Yeater money invested in certificates of deposit and treasury bills right now, which makes for very liquid assets," Pelham said. "If the bond issue had passed we may have gotten both buildings for little or no extra cost to the taxpayers depending on the economic situation and reassessment."

Board President William Hopkins commended Pelham's economic judgment since the estate was at one time invested in the stock market. "Mr. Pelham, however, pulled out of the stock market at its height, which was a stroke of genius."

Buller will meet soon with SFCC administrative officials to determine final needs for the new facility and then will start drawing up the plans, according to Davis.

Discussion of the future of the vocational-technical facility and program met with some difference of opinion.

Board member Richard Banks, Cole Camp, said he was not anti-vocational, but "I can't see busing kids 33 miles during the fuel crisis."

Clarence Frisch, Lincoln, said the Lincoln schools don't have vocational-technical programs, which will be required by the state in 1976. "I don't like the idea of busing either, but you can get so much more for your money here," Frisch said.

Board member John Ragland, Cole Camp, said voters will see the benefits of area technical centers if they have to pay $1.50 extra per $100 assessed valuation instead of 10 or 15-cent increases that SFCC has been unsuccessfully proposing.

Other action taken by the board included:

- ✓ Approval of a request for automotive-technical equipment totaling $5,020.
- ✓ Permission to advertise for property liability insurance for policies expiring in December.
- ✓ Approval of Virginia McAllister as the new in-service director of health occupations.

Ann Landers

Mother's photograph would be treasured

Dear Ann Landers: I was stopped cold by the letter from the woman who hated to be photographed because she was overweight. She complained that certain members of her husband's family were very sneaky. They snapped candid photos of her from the worst possible angles at every opportunity.

My husband's mother felt the same way, only it was her nose she was self-conscious about. The dear woman died before I had a chance to meet her. I regret this because I'm sure we would have been very good friends.

The family respected my mother-in-law's wishes, and there's not a single picture of her anywhere. How my grandchildren and I would have treasured a single photograph, but, alas, there is none. — Say Cheese, Please

Dear Cheese: "Vanity, thy name is woman!" Have you thought of her high school yearbook or relatives who go way back? I'll bet with a little imagination you could dig one up.

Dear Ann Landers: In recent weeks you have printed a number of letters about mothers and daughters who couldn't get along. The psychiatrist you quoted was wrong when he said, "Perhaps if the child showed some concern for the mother, the emotional support might serve as a bridge to help them both." I couldn't disagree more.

My mother and I had fights from the time I could talk until I was 25, which was four years after I married. I bent over backwards to please her but never could. She told me that when I was born she was miserable because I came too soon after my brother. I remember the black-and-blue marks from her fingernails when she pinched me, and the headaches from being slapped on the side of the head. I recall the day she pushed me against the stove because I didn't dry a glass properly.

When I took my dad's advice at 21 and moved out of the house she accused me of thinking I was "too good for the family."

Many years have passed and we get along fairly well now. I had almost forgotten the hell I went through until I read that letter in your column. I don't know what happened to change things. Maybe it was just the passing of time, or perhaps the Lord has dealt with her. Thanks, Ann, for letting me air my feelings. — Been There, Too

Dear B.T.: If your description of the way your mother treated you is accurate, the woman was mentally ill. Perhaps your relationship improved when she regained her mental health. Consider that possibility, please.

Dear Ann Landers: I just read the letter from the mother who was distraught because her daughter's illness was diagnosed as epilepsy. My reaction was quite different. I said, "Is that all? Thank God! I was afraid her life was in danger."

The neurologist told us to "let everyone know — friends, family, schoolmates, teachers — so they can help."

It was good advice. Being open has been much better for our daughter, too. She is not ashamed the way some epileptics are.

I have discovered that people can be wonderfully understanding if you give them

Art show near Warsaw re-scheduled

An exhibit of the paintings of E. M. "Ike" Parker, Clinton, originally scheduled for last Sunday, was reset for this coming Sunday after being rained out. As before, the showing will be held at the Kaysinger Bluff Overlook, two miles north of Warsaw.

Parker's paintings will not be for sale, but are being shown to give residents an unusual opportunity to view his works in one large collection.

Peddling preachers press ahead

By MARGARET GENTRY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Rev. Sun Myung Moon and his fervent disciples are swooping across the country with a brand of Christianity embracing politics and peddling.

To their dismay, they've swooped straight into the hands of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, which thinks the Rev. Moon's Unification Church may be teaching its young foreign trainees more about peddling than preaching.

The Immigration Service has threatened to deport 61 of the foreign trainees who failed to leave the country after their visitor's visas expired. About 500 more face similar treatment.

"I am again and again embarrassed in front of them that our country in effect is saying, 'We don't want you,'" said Neil A. Salonen, president of the church's American branch.

While the government moves toward judgment, the church is proceeding with heavily advertised "day of hope" rallies scheduled in six cities before Christmas.

In Washington, site of the Oct. 16 appearance, thousands of handbills bearing the Korean preacher's sedate visage are blooming from sidewalk trash cans, vacant store windows and the fences along construction projects.

The blitz then moves to Atlanta, Chicago, Seattle, San Francisco and Los Angeles.

Published and broadcast advertising for such rallies consumes much of the U.S. church's multimillion-dollar annual budget.

Salonen said 90 per cent of the $7 million raised last year came from the fund-raising activities such as those questioned by the Immigration Service.

The converts, most of them youthful, are dispatched to peddle peanuts, flowers, candles and other small items door-to-door or from small sidewalk stands.

Trainees peddle "only as part of a much larger program of evangelism, lecturing, Bible and other religious study, prayer, workshops and many other activities," Salonen said.

But the immigration service saw it differently.

The 61 trainees whose visas had expired were told to leave voluntarily by Sept. 20 or face deportation proceedings. But they probably will be allowed to stay while the church challenges the order through administrative hearings and lawsuits.

"We had received complaints, some from local authorities who in turn had received complaints especially on the door-to-door peddling," said INS spokesman Verne Jervis.

Meantime, the church is pressing ahead with a widespread campaign for believers in a dogma flavored as much with politics and Oriental philosophy as with traditional Christian tenets.

Moon, 54, claims to have seen a vision of Jesus while praying on a Korean mountainside at the age of 16. Nine years later, he began the evangelistic mission but soon fell into the hands of Communist forces who held him in a prison camp nearly three years.

He founded the Unification Church in the mid-1950s and missionaries brought it to the United States a decade later. Salonen said U.S. membership has grown to about 25,000 but only about 6,000 are active workers. The church lists headquarters in every state, with the largest followings in New York, Washington and San Francisco.

The greatest number of people to cram into and on a Volkswagen is 111, set by students in Hamilton, Ont.

Anti-pornography law studied here

Copies of a proposed city ordinance prohibiting obscene conduct and distribution of obscene material in Sedalia are currently being examined by City Council members.

The ordinance was drawn up by City Counselor Robert Fritz who began studying municipal authority over pornography with Third Ward Councilman Carl Franklin several months ago.

Franklin said a request had been submitted to him by the Harmony Baptist Association. Mayor Jerry Jones received a letter from the Sedalia Council of the Knights of Columbus in September urging an anti-pornography ordinance in keeping with the order's objective "to fight the evils of pornographic material and movies."

The lengthy ordinance would replace a current section of the city code which Fritz says is at least 15 years old and needs to be updated.

The present section, entitled "indecent exposure, lewdness, and immoral acts" generally, covers prohibited activities, but does not include a definition of obscenity.

The new ordinance defines obscene as "that which the average person, applying contemporary community standards in the city of Sedalia, Mo., would find, taken as a whole, (1) appeals to the prurient interest; and (2) which portrays, represents depicts or describes in a patently offensive way ultimate sexual acts, normal or perverted, actual or simulated, masturbation, excretory functions, and lewd exhibition of the genitals; and (3) which, taken as a whole, does not have serious literary, artistic, political or scientific value."

The proposed ordinance prohibits a person knowingly to: prepare, print, copy, manufacture, produce, reproduce, publish, sell, rent, lend, transport, exhibit or distribute any obscene item, exhibition or performance to minors or to the public.

The proposed anti-obscenity ordinance would also prohibit nude and obscene conduct in the city.

The ordinance is based on several Supreme Court decisions in the recent years which have attempted to define obscenity and which gave local governments the power to define and control obscenity according to local standards. Fritz said he also consulted model ordinances passed in other Missouri cities.

Ford is pleased by format

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford is described as well pleased with a new press conference format that allows follow-up questioning. And he has further experiments in mind.

"We're considering a variety of forums and formats," Press Secretary Ron Nessen said after Ford's Wednesday news conference in the sun-drenched White House Rose Garden.

Under active consideration is a proposal that reporters seek Ford's recognition by silently raising their hands rather than jumping up and shouting. "Mr. President."

Nessen is seeking the views of newsmen on this idea. Some like it and others complain they'd feel like school children vying for the teacher's attention.

For the first time, Ford encouraged the press corps to ask follow-up questions if his initial responses were deemed incomplete or otherwise unsatisfactory. Eight reporters asked second, related questions and 10 did not.

One reporter, Allan S. Emory of the Watertown, N.Y., Times, said he wasn't allowed to ask a follow-up question.

As soon as the session was over, Ford headed for the first rank of reporters, who had been sitting on folding chairs in front of him, and asked, "What did you think of it?"

Everyone he questioned expressed satisfaction with the new arrangement.

"He thought it went well," said Nessen. "He thought the new format worked and he liked the sunny mood of the whole occasion."

But Emory said later, "It seemed to me that the President was pretty annoyed by my question. So even though I remained on my feet, which was supposed to be the signal that you wanted to ask a follow-up question, as soon as the President finished with the answer to my question, he turned and recognized another reporter."

Bond pledges cooperation on inflation

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Gov. Christopher S. Bond has pledged Missouri's full cooperation to President Ford in his "balanced approach to fighting inflation."

In a telegram to the President Wednesday, Bond said he promises the people of the state that Missouri will have a balanced budget in fiscal 1976. Estimates have placed the state budget deficit at $50 million by the end of this fiscal year next June.

"We will carefully consider and weigh the impact of new spending programs in Missouri and will pursue at the state level the preparation of inflationary impact statements with regard to the rules and regulations of new programs," Bond said.

The governor, in his telegram, asked for copies of presidential directives explaining the federal inflationary impact statements, which Ford asked Congress to provide in his economic address Tuesday.

"I believe we can help meet the objectives of your program," Bond told the President, "and the needs of the people of Missouri and the nation."

Warns 'deadly defect' in campaign reform bill

BROOKFIELD, Mo. (AP) — Missouri will vote next month on a law designed to reform the financing of political campaigns, and the publisher of the Brookfield Daily News-Bulletin warned today that it has a deadly defect.

"I admire the idea of political reform," said George P. Williams. "There is little doubt but that Watergate demands better control of campaign spending. But sometimes the medicine is worse than the disease. You may find towns like Brookfield and Kennett, Booneville and Carthage being unable to find candidates for the important positions of directing city and school governments."

Williams stated his protest in a letter to "Missourians for Honest Elections," a St. Louis organization backing a proposed law which will appear on the ballot Nov. 5 as "Proposition One."

The letter also was published in today's Daily News-Bulletin. Williams pointed to a section of Proposition One which would require each candidate for public office to list "the sources of any salary, gift, fee or retainer in excess of $500 received directly or indirectly for services during the prior 12 months."

"The school board member in the rural area receives nothing for his service in that capacity," Williams wrote. "In Brookfield's case, the city councilman gets 'one dollar per year,' which generally is framed to commemorate his or her time of service. The same pay scale applies to fire and nursing home districts, as a general rule."

Williams said it already is difficult to get candidates for such offices. In a recent special city council election in Brookfield there was only one candidate.

"If the limitation is added that a candidate or spouse must file the names of all those who spent more than $500 with him or her on his wife or her husband, then you eliminate a broad spectrum of those who are willing to serve," Williams said.

"Unfortunately, they are the very ones you need."

Williams asked how the owner of a super-market could possibly comply. How could a professional comply without violating the confidential patient or client relationship?

"Few men I know would file for public office if it was necessary to list each individual and business spending more than $500 with them during the past 12 months," Williams said.

"Think what a competitor could do with that!"

Doctor wins latest battle

KANSAS CITY (AP) — "My lawyer told me to polish up my license," said R. Bernard Finch, the California physician who served 10 years for slaying his wife, of the latest action in his quest for a license to practice in Missouri.

"That's what I'm doing," he said Wednesday after learning that the Missouri Court of Appeals-Kansas City Division refused to grant a motion by the Missouri Board of Healing Arts to rehear Finch's application.

The court also rejected a request to refer the dispute to the Missouri Supreme Court. The board now has 30 days to file a motion asking the high court to intervene and a spokesman said such a motion will be filed.

Finch has worked as an X-ray technician in El Dorado Springs, Mo., since shortly after his parole from prison in 1971. He has tried to get a license to practice medicine since and the town of 3,300 in southwest Missouri has supported his campaign since it needs a physician.

The healing arts board contends that Finch's conviction of a felony in California disqualifies him from practicing. In September the Court of Appeals ruled the board has ignored evidence that Finch had been rehabilitated, was morally qualified and had the required medical talents.

Indiana's GOP Senate effort is uphill battle

By DARRELL CHRISTIAN
Associated Press Writer

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (AP)—Tickets for a recent appearance by Republican Senate candidate Richard G. Lugar misspelled his name.

The printer either was politically naive or a Bayh sympathizer, the host county chairman said after the tickets came out "Lugar."

Either way, the error reflected the Indianapolis mayor's struggle to upset incumbent Democrat Birch Bayh, who holds a fluctuating lead for a third term that could propel him into a 1976 presidential campaign.

Watergate turmoil in Washington, police corruption charges in Lugar's own city and recognition problems outside Lugar's native central Indiana have dampened Republican spirits.

Abortion and busing, two issues potentially explosive for Bayh, faded when the senator's constitutional amendments subcommittee delayed action on the first and a federal court decision temporarily cooled the second.

"Everything that's happened this year has just been pennies from heaven for Bayh," Mitch Daniels, a Lugar campaign official, complained.

Republican Gov. Otis R. Bowen said Lugar had a rapid rise last spring, but slipped and then leveled off after President Ford pardoned Richard M. Nixon and granted amnesty to Vietnam-era deserters and draft evaders.

Lugar hopes to close the gap with a last-month television blitz. Bayh advertisements started running Sept. 9, but were withdrawn from television after two weeks to prevent overexposure.

The third-party candidacy of Don L. Lee, 34, Indianapolis tool and die maker, could tip a close election. Lee is the American party candidate, successor to the George C. Wallace party that polled 13 per cent of the Indiana vote in 1968.

Bayh, 46, from rural Shirkville in western Indiana, is counting on labor support, and the state's two largest unions, the United Auto Workers and the AFL-CIO, are prepared to provide manpower on election day to get out the Democratic vote.

First elected in 1962 in a major upset of veteran Republican Homer E. Capehart, Bayh has remained popular with a basically conservative constituency while voting a generally liberal line in Washington. He was re-elected by 75,000 votes over William D. Ruckelshaus in 1968, when Nixon carried the state by more than 200,000.

On the streets, Bayh is likely to be seen without his suit jacket, shirt sleeves rolled up, flashing a boyish grin and slapping a friendly passerby on the back. One of his television spots shows him driving a tractor, support for his claim to be the "last dirt-farmer in the U.S. Senate."

Lugar, 42, waging his first statewide race after seven years as mayor of Indianapolis, the state's largest city, is harder for the average Hoosier to identify with. A former Rhodes scholar, he appears uncomfortable mixing in crowds and generally stays behind the podium.

He is a gifted extemporaneous speaker with an expansive vocabulary, but that has caused some problems.

"He keeps coming up with new words to describe the same thing, and people think he's saying something different," said L. Keith Bulen, Indiana's Republican national committeeman and Lugar's campaign manager. "We'd like to boil it down to at least some of the same phrases."

The Lugar strategy is to hammer repeatedly at the same points to depict Bayh's voting record as too liberal for Indiana. To boost that effort, he went on a whistle-stop train tour of 18 northern Indiana counties last weekend.

Lugar needs a large majority in his home Marion County, the state's largest, where he won re-election as mayor by 50,000 votes in 1971. With reports his likely margin there has dropped, Lugar's last-month television push will concentrate on that area.

Inflation has overshadowed all other issues. Lugar blames Bayh and other "big spender" Democrats in Congress for inflation. He advocates a balanced budget and tax reform to stimulate competition and productivity.

Bayh has attacked Lugar's city administration. He argued for a special prosecution in a police corruption investigation, which Lugar has opposed, and temporarily threw Lugar on the defensive by noting the Indianapolis city budget has increased 2 1/2 times since 1967.

Lugar has made an issue of Bayh's brief campaign for the 1972 Democratic presidential nomination, cut short when his wife, Marvella, underwent surgery for breast cancer. Lugar has pressed Bayh to disclose his 1971 contributors, although not required by law, and asked if Bayh's refusal was to hide possible conflicts of interest.

Political observers believe the withdrawal of Massachusetts Sen. Edward M. Kennedy from the presidential race opened the door for another Bayh bid in 1976. Bayh said earlier this year he would run only if there were no other viable candidate.

The Lugar for Senate Committee reported raising

The Nashville sound

Singer comfortable with country

By CHRISTOPHER CABOT
Associated Press Writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP)—Don Williams' songs are as soft and country as well-worn denim.

Appropriately, Williams himself, a man with an easy smile and thoughtful eyes, seems as at home in denim as many modern country singers do not. Williams looks like the genuine article.

"I think I really understand country music," he says. "There is something about the way I feel relaxed with country music. I'm at home with it."

"I think my music is pretty pure country. I feel it and it sounds good to me."

A native Texan, Williams grew up singing and listening to country music. Ironically, however, his first musical fame came as a folk-pop singer. In 1964 he formed and led the Pozo-Secco Singers, best known for the song "Time."

"I liked singing with Pozo," Williams recalls. "But I felt funny in the rock scene. I never really understood it."

"After Pozo folded (1971), I gave up music for a while. I was really frustrated and felt directionless. I tried some other things, but music is the only thing that has stayed a challenge."

"I realized then that if I had anything to say it was in the country field. I really didn't feel honest in a rock bag."

So Williams came back to music, this time just himself and his guitar and a lot of country songs. He came to Nashville in 1972 and recorded two albums on a JMI label.

Earlier this year he switched over to Dot Records and released his first country hit, "I Wouldn't Want to Live if You Didn't Love Me." Just as the single reached the top of the charts, Dot released Williams' third album.

1974 has been a busy year for Williams. His manager submitted him for a part in "W.W. and the Dixie Dancers Kings," a Twentieth Century Fox film made in Nashville starring Burt Reynolds.

"I play Leroy, just plain 'ol Leroy with no last name, one of the Dance Kings."

"It was really fun being in the movie. I first auditioned for just a bit part, but wound up in a full-length role. I'm kind of afraid to see myself on the screen. Acting is quite a challenge, especially when you have no training."

Additionally, Williams has formed his own music publishing company, Don Williams Music.

"I won't ever become one of the giants of Nashville," he claims. "But I want to handle my own songs and I have some friends who write for me and I handle their material."

"I like to be involved in all parts of music. Writing and making records are the most satisfying parts. I produce my own records. Dot goes along with it and even promotes it some."

At a time when country music is becoming broader and broader, Williams insists on sticking to his own sound.

"I never have been one for experimenting for experimenting's sake. I like new sounds, but whether I'll go in new directions, I can't say. I have resisted trying to cross-over into pop. That just doesn't seem honest to me."

Stern enforcement of antitrust laws promised

WASHINGTON (AP) — Butchers, bakers and zipper-makers already are feeling heat from the Ford administration's campaign against price-fixing. Future targets may face tougher treatment and million-dollar fines.

President Ford gave the attack fresh impetus Tuesday when he promised stern enforcement of antitrust laws and asked Congress for harsh penalties for violators.

No President since Harry S. Truman has taken such a strong public stand against illegal corporate conspiracies, said government antitrust lawyers.

The administration attack is designed to end business practices which diminish competition and force prices up for the consumer.

Assistant Atty. Gen. Thomas E. Kauper, head of the Justice Department's antitrust division, has estimated that such practices cost Americans as much as $80 million a year.

"I am determined to return to the vigorous enforcement of antitrust laws," Ford said as he sent Congress proposed legislation raising the maximum fine for antitrust violators from $50,000 to $1 million for corporations and $100,000 for individuals.

With his statement, Ford took up an attack which has been gaining momentum in the department and the Federal Trade Commission.

Though he endorsed its key elements, Ford said nothing about Atty. Gen. William B. Saxbe's plea for stiffer prison sentences as well as fines for corporate conspirators. Saxbe called on Friday for legislation raising the maximum prison term for price fixing from one year to five years.

Ford's written proposals for tougher fines were sent immediately to Congress where a House committee earlier in the day approved legislation setting the maximum corporate fine at half the amount Ford asked. The bill sets the individual fine at $100,000, as the President requested.

Sampson claims he saved Makarios' life

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Nikos Sampson, proclaimed president of Cyprus by National Guardsmen who ousted Archbishop Makarios, says he saved the life of Makarios by

Test missile launch termed successful

(Democrat-Capital Service) WHITEMAN AFB — Whiteman AFB crews Monday successfully launched a Minuteman missile from Vandenberg AFB, Calif., as one of a series of test launches.

Whiteman crews taking part in the exercise were the primary missile combat crew commander by Lt. Lawrence Liedtke; primary deputy missile combat crew commanded by Lt. Gary Golson and a secondary missile combat crew commanded by Lt. Michael F. Kaiser. Maintenance work on the missile was also done by Whiteman crews.

The test missile was selected at random from those on alert at Whiteman and was transported to California and placed in a Vandenberg launch facility.

ordering that he be allowed to flee.

Sampson, a newspaper publisher, member of parliament and former gunman for the pro-Greece EOKA-B guerrillas, made the claim Tuesday in his newspaper, Mahi, recalling his eight days in office after the July 15 coup.

As Sampson described the incident:

It was July 16 in the western Cypriot city of Paphos and Makarios was trying to board a British helicopter to fly to refuge at the nearby British base of Episkopi.

Sampson was at National Guard headquarters in Nicosia when the Greek officer in charge of guardsmen sent to arrest Makarios radioed that he could see the archbishop through binoculars, crouching and running toward the helicopter.

The officer added that his artillery could blast Makarios before he reached the copter or his anti-aircraft gun could bring down the craft after it was aloft.

"I seized the radio and shouted 'Don't fire. Let him go,'" Sampson wrote. "When the officer asked who was speaking I replied: 'Sampson, Sampson, the president of the republic. I order you not to strike. Let Makarios go...."

The Paphos officer asked for confirmation from the leader of the coup. "I looked the leader of the coup straight in the eye and told him, 'Please ask him to obey my command.' The leader of the coup then asked the officer in Paphos to obey me," Sampson wrote.

The article did not name either officer.

The Greek officers could not be reached for confirmation of Sampson's story because the guard's officers were recalled to Greece after the Greek junta fell in the aftermath of the Cyprus coup. The Cypriot National Guard, the island-state's army, was trained and led by Greek officers, who engineered the revolt against Makarios.

However, the head of the criminal investigation department of the Nicosia police under Makarios, Kypros Mourouziades, confirmed the article.

Sampson quit as president after Turkish troops invaded the island on July 20 and his supporters in the Greek junta resigned in favor of a civilian government. He was replaced by Glafcos Clerides under a provision of the Cyprus constitution that makes the speaker of the house of representatives interim president in the president's absence.

Drive start

Mayor Jerry Jones, right, helped kick off the Knights of Columbus annual Tootsie Roll Drive for mental retardation Wednesday with his own donation. Jones officially proclaimed the coming weekend as Tootsie Roll drive weekend. According to Fred Huhman, chairman of the drive, (far left) half of the proceeds are distributed on the state level and half will go to the Children's Therapy Center. ### Polly's pointers

Elbow grease fails to clean off stairs

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY — Do tell Carla the way I get a cork out of a bottle is to use a twine string with several knots made on one end, one on top of the other, until the knot is of a good size. Lower the string inside the bottle with knots at the bottom, turn bottle upside down so the cork will fall into the neck of the bottle and the knot will be behind the cork. Pull. Presto, the cork will come out. — FLORENCE.

DEAR POLLY — I am a school teacher who has discovered chalk is good for more than its intended use. I find it is often most effective for covering soil and blemishes in wallpaper. It comes in so many shades that one is bound to blend with the paper. I find I use cream colored the most and just gently rub it in with a clean fingertip. — ELIZABETH.

DEAR POLLY — My husband sleeps during the day, so dark shades or curtains were needed in the room where he sleeps but I could not find any to fit the windows. I decided to use black bath towels. One side was hemmed to slip on the curtain rod and I soon had good practical and reasonably priced shades that are easy to keep clean. They can be washed and are ready to hang again in no time at all. — LUPITA.

Polly's problem

DEAR POLLY — When I removed the rubber-backed carpet from my back stairs I found the backing had stuck to the steps. I tried scraping and scrubbing but neither worked. I hope some reader has suggestions as to how I might remove this. — K.J.C.

Company's gas supply has declined

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Area gas consumers will not have their heat cut off this winter but industrial users will have to cut back, the president of the company that pipes natural gas to retailers in about 500 towns, mostly in Kansas and Missouri, said Wednesday night.

"We're going to have less gas available for our system than last year by virtue of the fact that our supply has declined," said Robert H. Chitwood, president of Cities Service Gas Company of Oklahoma City.

"We're curtailing our supply to our industrial customers and we have notified them."

The company, a subsidiary of Cities Service Company, Tulsa, sells some natural gas directly to industrial customers, he said. The rest is channeled through local gas companies.

"I can see no curtailment of firm residential requirements," Chitwood said. "It depends on how cold this winter is. Last winter was five per cent warmer than normal."

"We're basing our estimates on a normal winter."

Chitwood, who was in Kansas City to present awards to company employees, said natural gas consumers should follow conservation measures called for by President Ford.

"It behooves us all to conserve, not only energy but food and everything else," he said.

Testicle problem needs correction

Dear Dr. Lamb — My 7-year old grandson has an undescended testicle. His doctor says it will have to be surgically descended into the scrotum and that it should be done by the time he is 8 years old. Further, he says that normal development depends upon both testicles being in place in the scrotum.

My question is, in what way is normal development affected? What would be likely to happen if nothing were done about this? Is this a common situation among boy babies? If so, I wonder about the countless ones whose parents cannot afford surgery?

Dear Reader — Most doctors agree something should be done about the problem before puberty gets very far along, so doing it by age 8 is quite reasonable. Some boys can be treated by hormones at an early age, but this should not delay surgical correction if the boy is approaching puberty. That is why your doctor wants it done by age 8.

In the undescended testicle the part that forms sperm cells will degenerate and will not produce any live sperm cells for reproduction. The cells that produce male hormone, though, still function. If both testicles are undescended then the male may have a normal male personality and appearance, but he will be sterile. With one normal testicle producing sperm, though, he may still be able to father children.

This condition is rare, occurring in only about one in 200 male babies. Many of these will have a spontaneous descent in the first year of life. After that most of them won't descend unless corrected, and there is an increased risk of cancer of the undescended testicle if it is not corrected. This is a small risk but, nevertheless, an additional consideration.

Dear Dr. Lamb — What is the difference between stilbesterol and estrogen? Are they both hormones?

Dear Reader — Actually the body forms several different but chemically similar hormones that are estrogens. Substances that have the same or similar actions on the body can occur in nature. They can be obtained from petroleum, peat, lignite and even pussywillow. Estrogenic substances have even been found in the mud at the bottom of the Dead Sea.

In 1938 a synthetic substance was introduced called diethylstilbesterol, better known as stilbesterol. It is made in the laboratory. It is chemically different from estrogen but has the same effects. Today this drug is used primarily to treat menopause symptoms.

One very important difference is that stilbesterol can be taken in tablet form by mouth. Real estrogen hormones cannot. They are destroyed by the digestive action. So, you can see why stilbesterol has become so popular, you don't have to have an injection to get results.

There are two main hormones (or groups of hormones) produced by the ovaries, the estrogens and progesterone. The estrogens dominate the first part of the menstrual cycle, and the progesterones the latter part. The body uses two carbon units from any of your food and changes it to cholesterol, chiefly in the liver. Cholesterol is converted to progesterone. And, progesterone is converted to testosterone (male hormone) on the way to forming the estrogen group. So, it isn't surprising that males and females have both estrogen and testosterone.

At wit's end

Drive-in dilemma

By ERMA BOMBECK

It's just my own personal observation, but I don't think God ever meant for men to do his banking, order food, or mail a letter from the driver's seat of a car.

If He had drive-ins in mind, He would have made our arms seven feet long and put curb feelers on our hips.

I have noted only two cars that have swung precariously up to the position where they can comfortably do business. One was a car from demolition derby and the other was a rental. Neither had anything to lose.

Drive-in banks intimidate me the most, possibly because I am "on camera" and quite self-conscious about having the tellers gather and exclaim, "Watch this one, Dorothy, she's the one who fell apart when her fender was ripped off last week."

Consequently, I have become something of a conservative. I pull a good six feet from the window and when the drawer slides out, I find that by opening my car door and forcing my head through my shoulder seat belt, pushing on the brake pedal with my right foot and bending my knee against the gear shift for leverage, I can slide my deposit slip into the drawer providing (a) I discontinue breathing for awhile, and (b) there are no high winds to circulate my deposit in the parking lot.

The mailboxes are something else. I never pull up to one of them that I don't visualize a meeting of the postal department in Washington figuring out how to position the boxes.

"No, no, Chester," says the designer, "You have placed the boxes on the driver's side of the car. We mustn't pamper them. Put them on the passenger side so the driver will have to put the car in park, straddle the stick shift in the console, cup his throat over the window and just try to sail the letter into this six-inch slot."

"Then the slot should be just above the pick-up times that have become blurred and unreadable?" asked Chester.

"Higher, Chester, much higher," smiled his boss. Yelling an order for five into a clown's mouth is something else again. Especially when you are alone. I feel like such a fool shouting until the varicose veins in my neck surface.

As my husband observed, "You don't have to go to drive-ins, you know. You can always use your feet."

Better to grow longer arms. c. 1974 Field Enterprises, Inc.

SO YOUR DREAM HOUSE IS COMING TRUE..

Some people are lucky enough to get their dream home and have a hand in every step of the planning and decision making. One of the easier decisions could be to install a system of electric heating. Regardless of the size and shape of your dream home, electric heating can do the job easily and economically. You may choose the electric furnace designed for split system air conditioning. Duct heaters which coordinate well with any fan-forced air duct system. The economical, energy-saving heat pump with an integrated system for heating and air conditioning. The electric hydronic boiler to be used with space-saver baseboard radiators. Radiant heat cable for ceilings. Or you may heat your entire home with baseboard units, recessed wall heaters or a combination. If you would like to consider electric heating, call Missouri Public Service Company and ask for a heating specialist. There's no obligation. We don't even sell any equipment. But we'll be glad to offer specific energy-saving advice for you to consider for your specific building plans.

Women reluctant to give up careers

By HELEN HENNESSY
NEA Women's Editor

NEW YORK — So you thought that wedding bells were in the back of every unmarried woman's mind, right? Wrong. Case in point: Single working women with five-figure salaries.

So observes W. Scane Bowler, chairman and chief executive officer of a national financial services organization.

"A growing number of women are clearly reluctant to give up lucrative positions and a sense of independence," he said.

"The antithesis is true for men in similar financial positions. The moment they begin to achieve monetary stature they begin to hear wedding bells. And so starts the hunt for the legendary rose-covered cottage."

A recent study showed that male executives are more marriage minded than their female counterparts.

Of 100 single women questioned, ages 35 to 44, all with substantial incomes, only 36 indicated any desire to marry in the near future. Queries of the same number of single men in similar age and salary brackets revealed that the opposite holds true — 87 were either already planning marriage or had hopes of marrying in the not-to-distant future.

Bowler added that these findings coincide with the national profile of men and women, aged 35 to 44 with annual incomes over $12,000. Fully 32 per cent of these wage earners are women whereas single men comprise only 4.3 per cent of the mix. "Evidently money and marriage for men go hand in hand," he said.

He further recommends that many of the women felt their careers were of prime importance. They feared marriage would rob them of a sense of freedom and conceivably even their jobs — not to mention their paychecks.

As one woman said, "A man would have to be quite affluent to provide me with the same amount of money I now earn each month."

Another opted for working as opposed to marriage because "it gives me a sense of belonging, of involvement, of identifying with a busy world rather than sitting at home reading about what is happening."

Bowler also sees a definite trend among such successful single women toward meaningful financial planning for future goals, including retirement. They are naturally much more concerned about such matters as insurance and investment than their stay-at-home sisters, he noted.

"For the most part the women enjoyed the relatively plush life style afforded by their substantial salaries and were cautious about placing it in jeopardy through marriage. Today the majority of women in the upper income brackets feel they literally cannot afford to get married," Bowler concluded.

W. Scane Bowler is chairman and chief executive officer of Pioneer Western Corporation whose principal subsidiaries are Western Reserve Life Assurance Co. and the Boston-based management company for the Pioneer group of mutual funds.

Vanilla, orchid of flavor

By TOM HOGE
AP Newsfeatures Writer

My earliest memory goes back to dinner at my grandmother's house climaxed by creamy, homemade, ivory-hued ice cream dotted with black specks that alarmed me the first time I saw them. My grandmother told me with some asperity that they were straight from the vanilla bean and gave the ice cream its true vanilla flavor.

In school I learned that the explorer Hernan Cortes discovered vanilla during the 15th century when he quaffed a cup of hot chocolate at the court of Montezuma. The Aztec Indians made this pungent beverage from the beans of the cacao tree, combined with bean pods the Spaniards named vainilla.

The aromatic vanilla bean is the fruit of a lovely, lemon-yellow orchid that has no odor itself. I'm told the bean has virtually no scent or flavor either, until it is dried and cured.

For three centuries after Cortes stumbled onto it, vanilla remained a luxury within reach of only affluent Europeans and Americans, since it was believed that only the Mexican Indians could grow the orchid and make it bear fruit.

Then a French botanist discovered that the orchid could be pollinated by a special species of bee native to Mexico. Madagascar eventually became the main center for raising the orchid, which grows on a coarse vine that requires about three years of pampering before it bears fruit.

Surplus of waste newspaper lowers prices

By JACK LEFLER
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The bottom has dropped out of the market for old newspapers.

"The market is very soft," said Harold Cowan, owner of AAA Industrial Paper Supply of Los Angeles, a firm that buys old newspapers for recycling into newsprint and industrial products.

The price has slumped from $32 a ton six months ago to $10 for domestic use and $5 for export.

Early this year there was a scramble for old newspapers, with Japanese and Korean interests grabbing a big percentage of the market and driving the price up. Now there is a surplus.

Japanese sources, commenting on the slowdown in paper imports, noted that their country's economy, which has been growing at a rate of 10 per cent a year for the last two decades, has slowed down and this has affected imports of all types.

In 1972, Japan and Korea shipped about 2,200 tons of old newspapers a month from Southern California ports.

As the demand rose, a monthly shipment of 12,000 tons was projected for 1974, but it should fall far short.

Cowan said he has a surplus of newspapers on hand, hasn't bought any in eight weeks and probably won't for another two weeks. This has put a crimp in collection drives by schools and churches, but their efforts are still going on to a limited extent.

Probably the biggest user of old newspaper for recycling into newsprint is Garden State Paper Co. with plants in Pomona, Calif., Garfield, N.J. and Alsip, Ill.

Sixty-five newspapers in California and about 200 throughout the country are using recycled newsprint. "Although prices for waste newspapers have dropped in recent weeks, the general paper industry, particularly on the West Coast, is stronger today than at any time since World War II," said Richard B. Scudder, chairman of Garden State.

"Today's waste newspaper prices are higher than any paid since January 1973, when an unexpected export demand resulted in unprecedented high prices.

"The so-called current drop in prices occurred as the export market closed off its purchases and the domestic market adjusted to the situation."

Scudder said Garden State has played an important role in attempting to bring some degree of stability into the traditionally cyclical waste paper market.

"For example," he said, "Garden State is the only company in the industry to establish a guaranteed floor price, providing our dealers with an assurance of profitability regardless of market fluctuations.

Cross-country piping of oil is under study

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP) — The possibility of a crude oil surplus on the West Coast after the Alaskan pipeline is completed has prompted an oil company to study the feasibility of a $1 billion pipeline to route reserves to energy-short areas.

Standard Oil Co. of Ohio announced Tuesday it had undertaken a study of piping oil cross-country because it is now believed the West Coast would not use all of the oil produced in Alaska.

"Decreasing demand because of public conservation efforts and the effect of higher prices and increased exploration for crude oil could result in a substantial surplus on the West Coast shortly after the pipeline is completed in 1977," the company said in a statement.

The Alaska pipeline is expected to carry about 1.2 million barrels per day at the start, increasing eventually to 2 million barrels a day.

Fred Garibaldi, Sohio's manager of corporate projects, said the study was launched in June by William Brothers Pipeline Co. of Tulsa, Okla., and is due to be completed by the end of the year.

In order to have a pipeline shortly after the Trans-Alaska pipeline is finished, a decision on the port and route must be made early next year, Garibaldi said.

Sohio has a one-third interest in the pipeline and owns more than half the recoverable reserves in the North Slope's Prudhoe Bay field.

Visiting the trial balloon department

WASHINGTON — Deep in the heart of the White House, far from the prying eyes of the public and press, is one of the most important rooms in the government. It is the place where they blow up the trial balloons which are floated by the Ford administration.

Thanks to a source who shall remain nameless, I managed to get into the room and see for myself how this all-important operation functions.

Buchwald

The room was very long — the size of a football field — and divided into workbenches. On each bench was seated a member of the administration or friend of President Ford blowing up large funny-shaped balloons.

They were so busy with their work, they didn't notice me.

"Say," I said to my source, "isn't that Mel Laird blowing up a balloon over there?"

"Yes," he replied, "the balloon he's blowing up has to do with gas rationing. He tried to float it last week, but it didn't fly."

"So he's going to send it up again?"

"He'll probably try it once more in a different shape and, if it's shot down this time, he'll go on to something else."

"Boy, you have to have a lot of air to blow up one of those balloons," I said.

"Mel does. He probably has floated more trial balloons than anyone in the Ford kitchen cabinet."

"How does he do it?" I asked.

"Well, he meets with the President and they decide what trial balloon Mr. Ford wants to send up."

"Let's say the President is thinking about gas rationing but he doesn't know if the public will go for it. So he tells Laird to send up a balloon and see the reaction. Laird comes down here and starts blowing."

"And then he sends it up?" I asked.

"Not really. He has to sell it to somebody. If he sent it up himself, nobody would take the balloon seriously. So he calls up Evans and Novak and says, 'The President is going to institute gas rationing.'"

"And Evans and Novak buy it?"

"Every time," my source said. "They float it in their column and then we wait for congressional and press reaction. If it's negative, the President orders Ron Nessen to shoot the trial balloon down by denying he has any intention of rationing gas."

"Doesn't Laird get angry after blowing up one of those balloons to see it shot down?"

"Heck, no. He works for the Reader's Digest, and this gives him something to do."

"Isn't that Secretary of the Treasury Bill Simon over there?"

"He's blowing up a trial balloon on an income surtax. He'll probably float it at a Chamber of Commerce dinner in Chicago tonight."

"Who are all those people sticking pins in the balloon that Simon is blowing up?"

"They're Arthur Burns, Alan Greenspan, Roy Ash and Paul McCracken. When it comes to the economy, all Mr. Ford's economic advisers do is stick pins in each other's trial balloons."

"Are my eyes deceiving me," I said, "or did Henry Kissinger just walk in?"

"Henry's here quite a bit," my source said. "He just floated a balloon last week on getting tough with the oil-producing countries and it landed with a thud. I guess he wants to take some new balloons with him to the Middle East."

"Look," I said excitedly, "there's Sen. Hugh Scott."

"Poor Hugh," my source said. "The Nixon people used him to launch all their trial balloons on Watergate and he's still trying to get back his second wind."

Charting a course for aid

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON — The United States Supreme Court settles down to work this month on a long docket of pending cases. Among the more significant actions are two more cases testing the tough question of public aid to parents who want private schooling for their children.

Kilpatrick

One case comes from California, the other from Pennsylvania. Actually, there is a third case from Missouri, not directly related, involving a parent who wants bus transportation for a child attending a Catholic school.

Each of the cases raised difficult issues under the First and Fourteenth Amendments. In almost every other test case in recent years, the high court has rejected public aid programs that might benefit church-sponsored schools. In the court's view, such programs violate the constitutional prohibition against laws respecting an establishment of religion. But Justice Lewis Powell, speaking for the court, has said that the narrow channel may still exist through which a valid law might be piloted. It seems doubtful, but perhaps one of the pending attempts will succeed.

The California case tests an act passed by the state legislature in December of 1972. The law provides a tax credit of $125 per child for taxpayers with incomes under $15,000 who send their children to non-public schools. Smaller credits are provided for those with incomes up to $19,000, but no credits are offered beyond that point.

Before the act could go into effect, an organization known as United Americans for Public Schools sued for a summary judgment and a permanent injunction against the law's enforcement. A three-judge federal court agreed with the plaintiffs and held the act invalid.

The test case from Pennsylvania went the other way. There the state legislature approved an act providing for reimbursement by the state of certain costs for auxiliary services in non-public schools. These include such services as guidance counseling, testing, remedial speech and reading, the teaching of English to Spanish-speaking children, "and such other secular, neutral, non-ideological services as are of benefit to non-public school children and are presently provided for public school children." The Pennsylvania plan also permits the state to loan textbooks in non-religious fields. A three-judge federal court found the program a constitutional exercise of state powers.

These latest efforts by California and Pennsylvania have a sound basis in political philosophy. As the California law says, "the public interest is best served through competition and diversity in educational opportunities offered by public and non-public schools." Ideally, every child of school age should be entitled to an equal slice of a state's appropriation for education. The equal protection clause of the Fourteenth Amendment would appear to require this. It ought to make no difference to the state how that slice is expended, so long as minimum public requirements are met.

The two acts reflect a practical interest also. Private schools are in money trouble throughout the nation. If they can be kept afloat through subsidies, tax credits, or tuition grants, the states can be saved substantial sums. In California, for example, 392,000 children attend non-public schools. At $1,000 a head, that is nearly $400 million the state is spared from raising.

The Supreme Court, as I say, has not been impressed by these arguments. In earlier cases from Pennsylvania, New York and Rhode Island, the court has seen nothing but the "entanglement" of church and state. The most ingenious state programs have been viewed as mere conduits for piping public money to parochial schools. This seems to me a pity. If private education serves a useful public purpose — and it clearly does — it ought to be possible to devise some valid plan for assisting parents who prefer private schools.

Explosive findings from police probe

The long-awaited results of the city's investigation of the police department, which were released Wednesday, constitute an explosive indictment of Chief William Miller, who was suspended by Mayor Jones.

From the findings of the investigation, which began last April, the city's legal advisors culled out 10 specific grounds for Miller's removal from office. Whether they stand up or not will depend on the outcome of a City Council hearing, which is expected soon.

The charges themselves certainly justify Mayor Jones' view that they are "serious." Involved are claims of protection of prostitution, the failure to file charges against two police officers who admitted 44 burglaries, other cases of Miller's refusal to maintain discipline within the department for infractions by officers, and the lack of investigation of the facts in an alleged case of flagrant police brutality.

One of the most serious charges, it would seem, is that Miller intimidated officers, as well as the city attorney, to keep them from cooperating in the police investigation, and that the chief gathered information on certain officials as a means of keeping them from pressing the investigation.

At the press conference Wednesday, special counsel William F. Brown said the episodes related in the charges, some dating back seven years, were uncovered only in recent months in the course of the investigation. This is a frightening example of the ease with which the city's "watchdog"—the police department—can itself go unwatched. We trust that one of the upshots of this entire business will be the creation of stringent non-police supervisory authority over the department.

Although it was a long time in coming, the report reflects the painstaking investigative work that went into its preparation. Those involved are to be commended.

We now look forward to a speedy resolution of the entire matter, including whatever house cleaning is necessary.

Bicentennial slogan ideas are pouring in

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — We have been hearing about America from its people. We asked, you may remember, for a Bicentennial slogan. The response was spontaneous; tens of thousands of citizens from all walks of life have sent us slogans, phrases and poetry expressing how they feel about their country.

Many have written accompanying letters of testimonial. To read them is to understand that the Watergate horrors, economic uncertainties and other afflictions have not shaken the American faith.

Some with a lifetime behind them have written about the turmoil they have seen. Youths looking ahead have written about the challenge of events. We have heard from aliens about the dreams which brought them to this land. Even a few convicts have responded, with a special poignancy, about the meaning of freedom.

Some have applauded President Ford's attempt to return to the White House a humanity and openness more becoming a free republic. Others have taken issue with the President over his decision to pardon Richard Nixon and thus suffocate the legal process to its crib. They reject the idea that the country would be better served by amnesia than by truth.

We received one slogan from an authentic American pioneer, 98-year-old Jesse L. Hall, who was born in the centennial year of 1876. He has spent his long life pushing westwards. He lived through the blizzard of 1887 in a homemade muslin tent on the Nebraska prairie. In Wyoming, he was elected to the state legislature. Now he abides in Reno, Nev.

He summed up his view of America in a simple, three-word slogan: "The Republic Stands."

From cell C-8 in the Florida state penitentiary, Raiford, Fla., Willie Young wrote: "Need I say, my life has been a miserable road to travel. After years of walking it alone, I discovered one must believe in something."

He put his sentiments into these words: "A Country not made by Hand but by the Grace of God and the Will of Man."

There were other poetic responses. "We may stumble but never fall: Down through the years, we still stand tall," wrote Raymond Richardson from Chicago.

A Boalsburg, Pa., teacher, Ruth H. Carter, felt "an extreme need for the children to know their country's heritage." She suggested this slogan: "So the Children Will Know."

In Toledo, Ohio, the second and third grade students at Lincolnshire School composed a slogan together: "I work for Democracy because it works for me."

Many other children sent in slogans. For instance, a 12-year-old Forest Heights, Md., girl, Mary Elizabeth Henry, proposed: "America, a Homesteaded Heart." And 14-year-old Penny Chandler of Fresno, Calif., sent in this one: "Two Hundred Steps — and More to Come."

Teen-agers, too, responded by the hundreds. From Annapolis, Md., 18-year-old James P. Gough told of his frustration over "recent acts by men in high places." Yet he could still offer two heartfelt slogans: "America, a Theme that is Timeless" and "America, Something Warm that Touched my Heart."

A 19-year-old, Johnny Carter of Long Beach, Calif., suggested this sign be posted across America: "Conquerors and Corruptors Beware. This Nation is the Property of the People."

And a Wilmington, N.C., high school student, Stewart Moshe, submitted this slogan: "There's No Way like the American Way."

From John Lauria of Jacksonville, Fla., we received a simple, sincere motto: "America, Where People are Happy." He added meaningfully: "I should know. I came here in 1903."

Here are a few other offerings selected at random from our mailbox:

Florence A. Tracy Revelle, Ardmore, Okla. — "Pride in our past; Faith in our future; Forward America."

Lionel Wernick, New York City — "America: The Promise Kept and now Renewed."

George Kelly, Philadelphia, Pa. — "Here Lives a Free People, 1776-1976."

Joseph P. McGoldrick, Jackson Heights, N.Y. — "In America, there are no impossible dreams."

John Klunck, Sheboygan, Wis. — "If we can't get to Heaven, we'll settle for America."

Jim Felton, Little Rock, Ark. — "America is coming of Age."

William Eric Rohrs, Tacoma, Wash. — "Now, Let's Put It All Together."

Adeline Feinberg, Belmont, Mass. — "Appreciate our Differences."

Louis Ginsberg, Paterson, N.J. — "Take no liberties with liberty."

Evelyn Conley, Pittsburgh, Pa. — "USA: Undaunted Stands America."

Ross Doty, Spokane, Wash. — "America, My Country: May She Ever Hold High the Torch of Freedom."

Meanwhile, our search for a Bicentennial slogan continues. Please send your suggestions to Slogans, c/o Jack Anderson, 1401 16th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036.

After his Stayman three-club bid had produced a three-diamond rebid by South, North jumped to six notrump to deny a four-card major. This bid represented the full strength of his hand plus a trifle more. With 3-3 breaks in hearts and clubs, South could run off with all the tricks.

South was not a believer in Santa Claus and wanted to give himself the best possible play for 12 tricks. He could count 11 winners and decided to develop a squeeze in case either opponent had both red suits stopped.

He ducked the first trick. This maneuver is known as rectifying the count. South still had his 11 sure winners.

He was trying for 12. After that start it was all over for the defense. South won the second diamond cashed his ace-king-queen of spades; entered dummy with a high club and cashed the jack of spades. That play squeezed East. He had to chuck a club or a heart and either discard gave South the slam.

You should note that if South won the first trick the squeeze could never develop, since East could never be forced to throw either a heart or a club.

S-C seeks consistency

Mexico invades Tigers' lair for Friday's home coming tilt

By VAUGHN HART
Sports Editor

Junior quarterback Mark Fine, who didn't start in Mexico's season opener against Hannibal, is expected to test Smith-Cotton's secondary in Friday night's homecoming battle at Jennie Jaynes Stadium.

Fine has completed 50 per cent of his passes (21 of 42) for 354 yards and one touchdown.

Unfortunately for coach Art Seals, the Bulldogs, 3-2, have lost the services of his leading receiver, John Fry. Fry had six catches for 160 yards until breaking a hand against Marshall in last week's 20-14 loss.

Senior end Butler Nunnally is expected to be Fine's primary target.

The Tigers secondary, which has been riddled by injuries since the season's outset, could be in for a busy night, especially if Fine can't move the club on the ground.

On the other hand, the Mexico defense may be in for a busy night of its own if the Tigers can sustain last week's superb rushing effort against Jefferson City, which netted 312 yards and three touchdowns.

Fine was moved into the starting lineup in the second game of the season, when Senior Gary McFarland was shifted to halfback.

Rounding out the backfield is speedy junior halfback Billy Fry, who is the leading rusher in the Mid-State Conference with 574 yards on 84 carries and six TD's; and fullback Ron Snell. Snell, used basically as the fake man and blocker in the Mexico Wishbone, has scored two touchdowns.

However, like Smith-Cotton, the Bulldogs have had trouble sustaining offensive attacks. Mexico's potent ground attack of past seasons hasn't developed this year.

Senior running back Mike Long has been a big disappointment this year for the Bulldogs. Long was a regular as a junior last year, but has performed below average. He has spent a lot of the time on the sidelines nursing injuries along with his inconstant play.

Likewise, the Tigers, which could just as easily be 5-0 as 1-4 according to head coach Greg Cook, have lacked offensive consistency. Although S-C has outrushed their opponents by more than 200 yards (954-745), they've managed only seven TD's on the ground.

Smith-Cotton and Mexico, a former member of the Central Missouri Conference, have had two common opponents to date. S-C lost to Blue Springs, 10-0, in the season's opener. Two weeks later the Bulldogs blanked Blue Springs, 14-0.

Marshall, which held Mexico to no first downs in the opening half of last week's game, edged the Tigers by two points earlier this season.

Looking at Smith-Cotton, which has had its share of nagging injuries, no major lineup changes are expected by Greg Cook. Rick McRoy will call signals, with four players expected to share the running back responsibilities — Marvin Spruell, Bill Deuel, Ray Newbill and Bob Trautman.

The balance of the offense is made up of ends Larry Miley and Mark Vinson; tackles DeWayne Stratman and Dennis Van Baale; guards Jim Barnes and Bob Paul. Doug Young will again be over the ball.

Defensively, Jim Giokaris and Vinson will start at the ends on the five-man front, teaming with tackles Stratman and Bob Campbell and nose guard Barnes.

Trautman and Paul will open at the linebacker spots; Spruell and Dennis Onwiler will be at the corners. Miley and Harry Browder, who suffered a broken finger two weeks ago against St. Joseph Lafayette, will be the safeties.

Also back this week is senior center Allen Fox, who suffered a fractured hand in the season's opener. Fox won't be pressed into the offensive set unless necessary. He may see some action at defensive end.

"It looks like we could make a season of it yet," Cook said Wednesday, "but we'll have to keep up the tempo we established last week against Jefferson City."

S-C escaped the Jefferson City game without any injuries. Looking back at last week's 21-18 loss to the Jays, Cook said he was as surprised as anyone about the way his offense was able to run inside.

"The entire offensive line did a very fine job blocking, opening up wide holes... I hope we can continue that pace," he concluded.

Tonight's game is only the second home contest of the year for the Tigers.

Next week, the Tigers resume Central Missouri Conference play in Hannibal.

Tigers' top ground-gainer picks right route on field

It's been a long time since a Smith-Cotton football player has had back-to-back games like those turned in by senior Marvin Spruell.

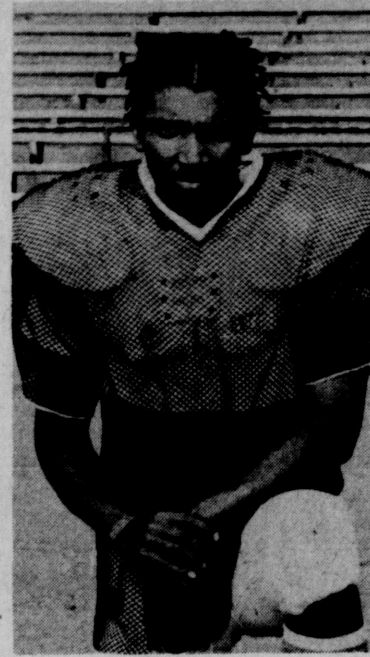

After getting off to a slow start, Spruell has really turned it on. Two weeks ago against St. Joseph Lafayette, Spruell ran for 231 net yards. Even more impressive was his 208-yard night last week against Jefferson City's stout defense.

"He's run well all year," says his head coach Greg Cook, "but the last two games have been something else. He's really come into his own."

Cook credits Spruell's two 200-yard games to two things — his ability to pick the right hole, and his overall talent.

"He picks the holes consistently, and follows his blocking extremely well," Cook commented this week. "He accelerates well, and has the speed."

Although the 165-pound halfback lacks the size of Dane Henningsen, who rushed for 857 yards last year, Cook compares Spruell with Henningsen, who has earned a starting spot in the Central Missouri State University backfield.

Marvin Spruell

a-days before school opened and fell behind some of our other backs," Cook said. "He's got some minor, nagging injuries that slowed him, but he's at full speed now."

Spruell is an all-purpose back. He runs inside, outside and can throw the halfback pass. He also has good hands as a receiver.

Spruell many times goes both ways, starting or substituting in the defensive secondary.

And on top of all this he handles the kick off responsibilities.

Cook said Wednesday that Spruell may also do some place-kicking too.

"He's just plain got a lot of talent," says his coach.

Through the first five games of the season, Spruell has picked up 566 yards on 70 carries. He's been on the receiving end of seven passes for 73 yards and has completed one of his three attempts. His 566 yards on the growing is more than half of S-C's team total.

"Needless to say," Cook commented, "he's been the spark in our somewhat dismal season on the scoreboard."

Hawks may have something new for K-State Wildcats

By The Associated Press

Kansas Coach Don Fambrough, preparing his Jayhawks for their Big Eight Conference opener against Kansas State, feels "we've both proven that we have complete football teams."

Fambrough was concerned about the two Wildcat quarterbacks, senior Steve Grogan and freshman Arthur Bailey. "The only difference is that Grogan is more experienced. They can both do a lot of things," he said.

Of Grogan, who has been bothered by a neck injury, Kansas State Coach Vince Gibson said, "Steve is feeling better than he has since the start of the season."

And, perhaps in a hint of what can be done for Kansas, Gibson said: "We haven't added anything new all year. It's time we did."

Nebraska's Tom Osborne expects a tough physical game in the Cornhuskers' opener against Missouri.

"Missouri's offensive philosophy is to line up and say here we come," defensive coordinator Monte Kiffin said. "That's basically our philosophy on defense so the game should be a real individual test."

Missouri Coach Al Onofrio isn't letting reports of injuries to key Nebraska players lull his Tigers.

"They have plenty other capable people," he said. "You just have to do everything well to beat Nebraska."

Iowa State's Earle Bruce expects his Cyclones to "be in good mental and physical shape" Saturday when they play Colorado.

"We had our best practice of the fall," he said Wednesday. "The offense looks very good and we've had good defensive workouts."

Oklahoma plays arch rival Texas outside the conference and the Sooners worked on kick coverage in anticipation of the razzle-dazzle return the Longhorns have shown.

Missouri Southern visits State Fair

State Fair Community College will face two and possibly three Sedalians in Friday's 7 p.m. soccer clash at Centennial Park.

The three, Dennis Johnson, Aaron Johnson and Dick Kinshella, are Smith-Cotton High School graduates now playing for Missouri Southern College, Friday's opponent.

Dennis Johnson is a former member of the Roadrunners, now playing for MSC.

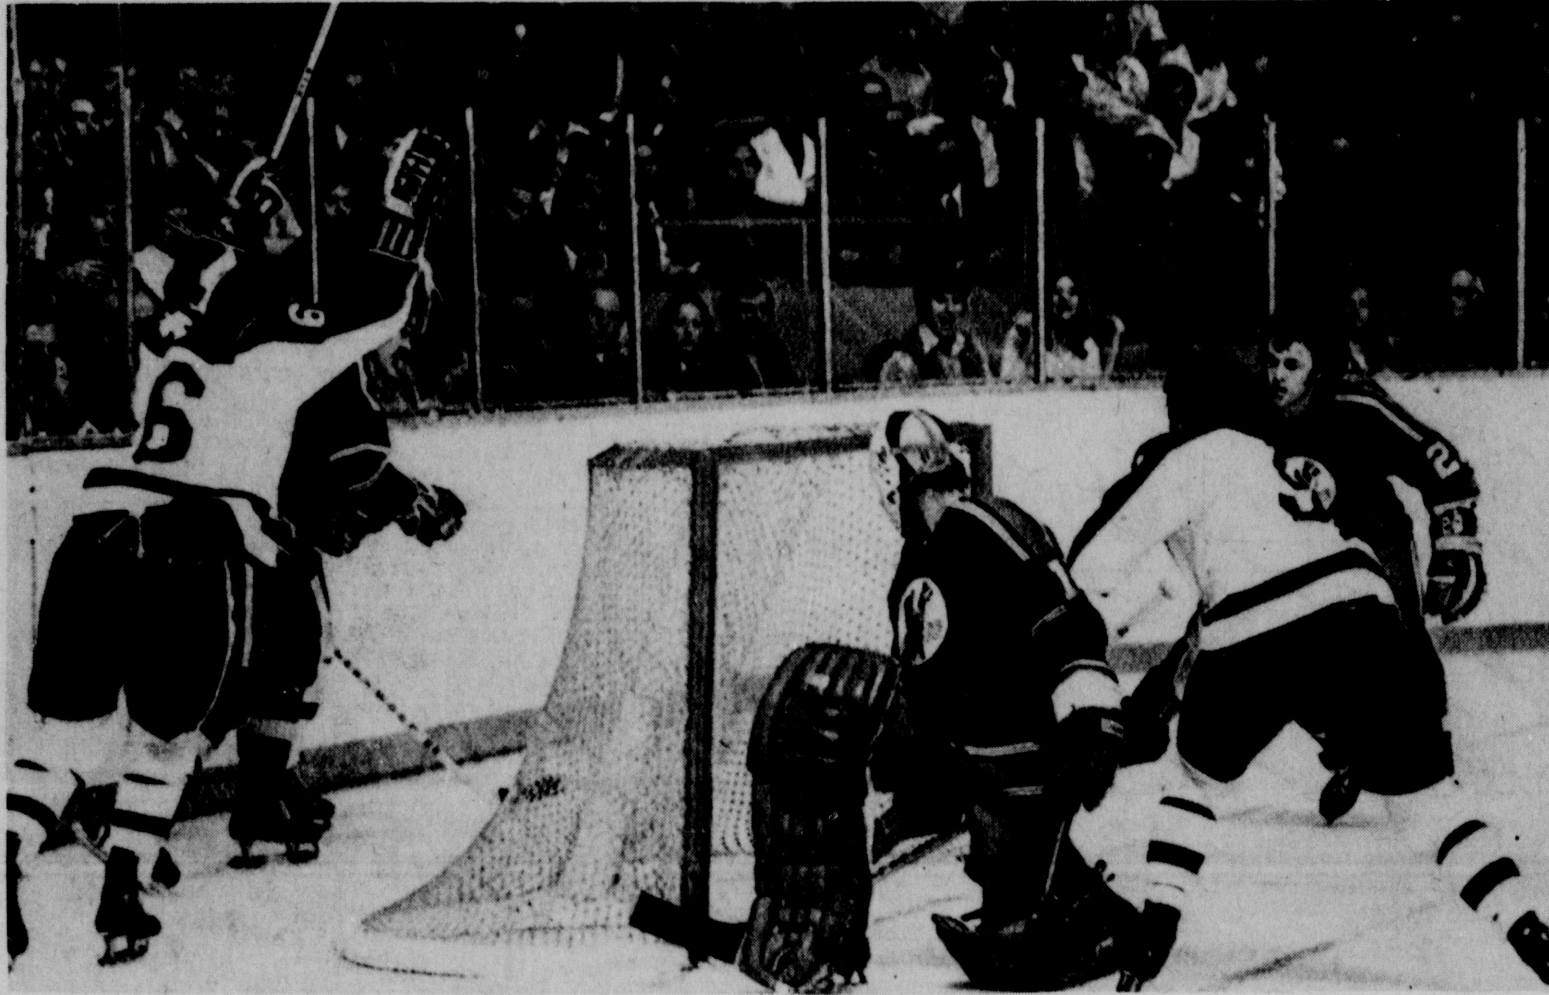

State Fair takes a 3-4-1 record into the game following Tuesday's loss to Westminster College of Fulton.

Missouri Southern comes off last weekend's Tri-State Tournament win in Joplin. MSC defeated Arkansas in the championship game Saturday.

Local television for Cards' fans

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The St. Louis Cardinals have announced that their National Football League game Sunday against the Dallas Cowboys will be televised locally.

Cardinal officials said the last tickets for the game were sold shortly after noon Wednesday, opening the way for the telecast by KMOX-TV. Under NFL rules adopted last year, games may be telecast locally if they are sold out 72 hours in advance of kickoff time.

Scouts, Caps lose

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

As it must with all newborn babes, the cold, cruel world caught up with the Washington Capitals and Kansas City Scouts.

For 40 minutes or so Wednesday night, the Caps and Scouts played like veteran National Hockey League teams instead of the infants they are.

Then inexperience took its toll of the two teams, making their NHL debuts. In New York, the Caps were hit by a four-goal barrage and fell 6-3 to the Rangers. And in Toronto, a similar fusillade gave the Maple Leafs a 6-2 victory over the Scouts.

In Wednesday night's other NHL games, the New York Islanders and Montreal battled to a 5-5 tie, Detroit nipped Chicago 2-1, Pittsburgh beat Minnesota 4-2, California and St. Louis tied 4-4 and Vancouver and Atlanta dueled to a 3-3 deadlock.

Maple Leafs 6, Scouts 2

Leading 2-1 after two periods, the Leafs got goals from Jim McKenny, Darryl Sittler and Ian Turnbull during the first 10 minutes of the third period, then Dave Keon's 350th career NHL goal capped the outburst with about a minute to play.

Red Wings 2, Black Hawks 1

Guy Charron tipped in a Jack Lynch shot with 37 seconds left to give Detroit its victory after Danny Grant of the Red Wings and Ivan Boldirev of Chicago had traded first-period goals.

New Met second baseman Felix Millan comes from Rio Piedras, P.R., home of the late Roberto Clemente.

Billie Jean opens strong

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Despite a two-week layoff, Billie Jean King says she is well satisfied with her play in the $50,000 Phoenix Women's Professional Tennis Tournament.

Ms. King, the defending champion and seeded first in the competition, easily overpowered Kristy Pigeon, 6-0, 6-3, Wednesday in second round action.

Ms. King, in the first set, posted three love games and repeatedly kept her opponent on the run with powerful placements.

With doubles competition beginning today, Ms. King will be idle. She faces Tory Fretz of Los Angeles Friday in the semifinals.

Miss Fretz defeated Bettyann

Stuart, of Los Angeles, 4-6, 7-5, 6-4 Wednesday in a match that took more than 2½ hours.

Virginia Wade of England, seeded fourth, easily beat down Barbara Downs, Alamo, Calif., 6-3, 6-2, and Wendy Overton, Ormond Beach, Fla., defeated Susan Mehmedbasich of El Cerrito, Calif., 6-3, 6-2.

Francoise Durr of France, the number five seed, toppled Ceci Martinez of San Francisco, 6-4, 6-2, and Helen Gourlay, seeded sixth, of Tasmania, was extended before defeating Mona Schallau of Iowa City, Iowa, 6-3, 4-6, 6-0.

Betty Stove of the Netherlands, seeded number seven, defeated Pam Teegeard of Los Angeles, 6-4, 6-4, in Wednesday night competition.

Today's singles competition will have Miss Gourlay facing Miss Overton and Miss Kuykendall will play Miss Stove.

The winners

There's no doubt about who won Wednesday's playoff games and earned the right to compete in the World Series, which opens Saturday in Los Angeles. In the top picture, Oakland teammates Gene Tenace (right) and Ray Fosse (left) converge on Rollie Fingers, who bailed the A's out of trouble against Baltimore in Oakland's 2-1 win. Below, jubilant fans and players rush Los Angeles Dodgers' pitcher Mike Marshall after the Dodgers took an easy, 12-1 win over the Pirates to wrap up the National League Pennant. (AP Wirephotos)

Dodgers, A's set for all-California World Series bout

Dodgers have easy time in 12-1 rout over Bucs

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It's an All-California World Series for the first time, and Steve Garvey said the Los Angeles Dodgers wanted it that way.

"We said collectively that we want to play the best team," said Garvey, hitting star of the Dodgers' 12-1 victory over Pittsburgh Wednesday that gave Los Angeles its first National League pennant in eight years.

"Oakland is the World Series champion and the American League champion again, so we have to beat them if we want to prove we are the best team in baseball."

The Dodgers — behind Garvey's two home runs and two singles, and Don Sutton's masterful pitching — whipped the Pirates Wednesday, winning the series three games to one. The two-time defending World Series champion A's eliminated Baltimore by the same margin in games for the American League crown.

The A's are expected to pitch Ken Holtzman, who blanked Baltimore last Sunday, and Los Angeles will open the series with Andy Messersmith, who beat Pittsburgh Sunday, in Saturday afternoon's game at Dodger Stadium.

Dodger Manager Walt Alton refused to draw a comparison between the Dodgers and A's because he hadn't studied scouting reports. "I don't know much about Oakland," he said.

Alton, whose first pennant came in 1955 when the Brooklyn Dodgers won their first World Series, didn't even want to compare his youthful 1974 team with those of even a decade ago, when Sandy Koufax pitched the Dodgers to a World Series triumph over Minnesota, the last time Los Angeles won it all.

"I'm so proud of this team with so many youngsters going so far as they have. This fella right here (Don Sutton) pitched outstanding ball for us."

Sutton, however, said the Dodgers, with young players in their second or third seasons — Garvey, Ron Cey, Dave Lopes and others — "are starting a dynasty." The 29-year-old pitcher, a rookie in 1966 when LA won its last pennant, said flatly that 1974's is the better team.

The Pirates, who won the NL East title for the fourth time in the last five years, had no qualms about picking the Dodgers to win the World Series.

"I pick the Dodgers," said Manager Danny Murtaugh. "I don't predict the number of games the series will go. I'll root just as hard as any Dodger fan for them in the series. It was a battle for the pennant up to now, and this is now a league vendetta."

"They outit us, outpitched us and just outplayed us, all the way around," said Pirate center fielder Al Oliver. "They deserve to go to the World Series."

Oakland gets only one hit but it stands in 2-1 win

BALTIMORE (AP) — The Oakland A's go after their third straight World Series championship with ailing Reggie Jackson and the team's other erstwhile sluggers in a slump.

But the resourceful A's manage somehow to score, and they still have magnificent pitching to use against the Los Angeles Dodgers. Both were apparent Wednesday in the 2-1 victory over the Baltimore Orioles which gave Oakland the American League pennant, three games to one.

The A's scored their first run on four consecutive walks in the fifth inning and another in the seventh on their lone hit, a double by Jackson following another of the 11 walks off Mike Cuellar and Ross Grimsley. Winning pitcher Jim "Cat-the way they're going to win the World Series.

After banging three home runs to beat Hunter 6-3 in the series opener, the Orioles scored only one more run. Through the fifth inning of the final game, they had gone 15 innings without advancing a runner beyond first base.

The A's weren't much better at the plate as they battled a Baltimore pitching staff which Oakland owner Charles O. Finley had feared would be tough to beat.

Jackson, playing the final three games as a designated hitter while hobbled with a pulled hamstring muscle in his right leg, had two hits in the four games.

Oakland's other three top run-producers, all of whom knocked in 73 runs or more during the regular season, didn't fare much better.

Sal Bando did have two homers among his three hits, and his first homer won the third game 1-0. Joe Rudi was limited to two hits and Gene Tenace went 0-for-11.

Ironically, it was the hitless Tenace who drew the fifth-inning walk off Cuellar which forced home the first run Wednesday.

Oakland and Dodgers: Study in different ideas

By DICK JOYCE

AP Sports Writer

Horace Greeley said something about young men seeking their fortunes in the West, and the Los Angeles Dodgers and Oakland A's did just that.

But when they put the baseball championship of California and the world on the line, it'll be very evident that more than 400 miles separate these teams, their styles, and their people.

Item: Charley Finley, nattily-attired and overbearing, walks into the Oakland A's dugout before game time and checks Manager Alvin Dark's lineup card. If Finley doesn't like it, he just might order a change or two.

Walter O'Malley, chomping on a big cigar, sits in his private box seat, minding his own business, leaving the running of the Los Angeles Dodgers to Walter Alton, who has had the job for 21 years — all on one-year contracts.

Item: Vida Blue, the A's pitcher who's been sullen for two years because of his 1972 contract dispute with Finley, is asked if there is any joy in the game of baseball.

"There's joy at payday," says the 25-year-old Blue. "Baseball is just a job."

Dodger pitchers don't talk like that. Dodger players don't act like Oakland players. They don't have clubhouse fights like the A's, whose superstar Reggie Jackson and young outfielder Bill North got into a brawl this year.

The Dodgers are mostly young and hungry athletes — a throwback to Branch Rickey's days in Brooklyn. Their stretch-drive flop last year was blamed on immaturity.

This year, the front office came up with two big needs — a power hitting outfielder and a relief ace in the persons of Jimmy Wynn and Mike Marshall — to go along with such young standouts as Garvey, Ron Cey, Bill Russell, Bill Buckner, Davey Lopes, Don Sutton and Andy Messersmith.

And Saturday at Los Angeles, for the first time since 1966, the Dodgers — Dem Bums for you oldtimers — are in the World Series. They meet the rowdy A's, a somewhat modern day Gas House Gang, reminiscent of the St. Louis Cardinals of the 1930s.

The A's have been there before. They have won the past two World Series and are cocky and confident that the championship banner will be flying over the Oakland Coliseum again.

But the Dodgers hope their all-for-one and one-for-all attitude, as rah-rah as it may sound to cynics and Charley Finley, will help knock the A's off their controversial pedestal.

Peters is named chairman of board

ANAHEIM (AP) — James M. Peters, a part owner of the California Sun of the World Football League, on Wednesday was named the team's chairman of the board and will act as chief executive officer.

Larry Hatfield will continue to serve in as the Sun's president.

Huskers favored over Missouri

OU rates big edge over Texas

By PICK M. WRIGHT JR.

Fearless Forecaster

After a somewhat disastrous week of forecasting (5-3 for a total of 23-8 in non-conference forecasting) it is time to get into the second season — the Big Eight race.

Previous to the Oklahoma-Texas clash the Big Eight has a 2.5 victory per team average, which is again tops for major conferences in the country. However, the Big Eight power is slowly eroding to stronger Big Ten and Southeast conference teams because of new limits on scholarships awarded per year. (The Southeastern conference has always been the major competition anyway.)

In the annual bloodbath between the Sooners and the Longhorns in Dallas, it looks like the Sooners again have the upper hand. Who can doubt OU's statistical strength (tops in the nation) with first, second and third stringers playing even if the competition has been relatively mild.

I don't see any other way to call this game except for a qualified Oklahoma victory, maybe not the severity of last year's 52-13 turn, but close to it.

Texas has a new defensive alignment which should take Oklahoma about one possession to figure out so I'll reduce last year's score by one touchdown. OU 45, Texas 13.

In the second season for six conference teams, the biggest question is: Will Missouri react to last week's thrashing by Wisconsin when it travels to Nebraska country?

Two years ago the Tigers got blown out of Lincoln and then took revenge on undefeated Notre Dame and last year lucked out a 13-12 revenge over the same Cornhuskers.

This year is probably a different story. MU will have to be lucky again if Nebraska quarterback David Humm is healthy, and I can't see the Big Red disappointing their fans. Nebraska 24, Missouri 13.

In basketball, Saturday's Kansas-Kansas State game would be termed a bloodbath, but in football in recent years the blood usually runs purple.

Kansas is by far the stronger team and probably is the third strongest in the conference on the basis of its surprisingly strong offense to go with a stout defense.

The only advantage KSU has is its fourth home game this season against its first really stiff competition in a deceptive 3-1 campaign so far. (Mississippi State beat K-State last week and isn't all that bad.) KU 34, K-State 10.

The other conference game shows Iowa State at Colorado — both teams which have showed some promise and some disappointment.

Iowa State held off one of the nation's top passing units, New Mexico, last week, and Colorado upset Wisconsin two weeks before, but both stumbled elsewhere.

Since Colorado has won its two games in Colorado I say they make it three in a row with a 27-21 victory.
